

As Vice President of Government Relations at H&R Block, George Agurkis leads the government relations team and its efforts to advance the company's legislative, regulatory, and policy priorities at the state, federal, and local levels, including those related to tax administration, bank partnerships, and small business. He has been instrumental in progressing policies that benefit H&R Block clients and the company, including spearheading an initiative to support enhanced identity verification standards and real-time data sharing to combat fraud.

George serves as Chairman of the Supervisory Committee for Wright Patman Congressional Federal Credit Union, where he is responsible for providing oversight of the credit union in conjunction with the Vice President of Internal Audit.

Prior to joining H&R Block, George served for a decade on the U.S. House of Representatives Committee on Rules in various roles, most recently as Senior Professional Staff and Policy Advisor. In this capacity, he provided expert counsel to the Chair and Committee Members on pending legislation, procedure, and votes, as well as the political landscape and dynamics within Congress to navigate legislative processes effectively.

He holds a bachelor's degree in biology from Wilkes University.
